Project Introduction:

Fascinated by the qualities of materials, plott express themselves with their graphic language in material-based surfaces and products. They create techniques that are both technical and tactile, Thriving on processes whereby colour, material and detail matter. With their self-initiated research projects, they have explored the idea of digitally printed geometric patterns and surfaces. Continuously experimenting with different materials and methods to develop new structures, patterns, and textile bindings, they convert traditional techniques, such as stitching, weaving, and knitting, to modern technologies and products.
