Project Introduction:

The Fabricant is a digital fashion house that operates within the virtual realm. Taking technology as our guiding line, we lead the way forward into a future in which clothing becomes a new form of identity. We create enriching digital fashion animations and renders that keep the viewer guessing. With Amber Jae Slooten as recently appointed creative lead, the house will develop its vision for the future even deeper. Slooten was the first to ever show holographic clothing on a real body during Amsterdam Fashion Week in 2016. Ever since then she has been experimenting with the human body, fabric and motion in digital space. As The Fabricant we want to inspire the industry that there are alternatives to the endless pollution, providing alternatives for photoshoots, fashion shows and we want to create cultural change within the industry. We strongly believe that clothing does not need to be physical to exist.
